ORQADESIGN

ORQADESIGN

Orqa Design provides creative design and web services, working with clients locally and around the world. The Malvern-based company specialise in branding, graphic design, web design and development, and email marketing – bringing together strategic thinking and clean, creative execution. They love working with startups, small businesses, and especially female-led organisations who want to build a confident, professional online presence. Their founder, Samantha Thomas, has brought together a small, skilled team that offers hands-on support and broad creative expertise. Every project is approached with care and collaboration, blending thoughtful design with real-world results.

The judges were particularly impressed by the depth of web design services, which are tailored to deliver lasting impact. The websites are built with the user in mind – prioritising experience, performance, SEO, and accessibility, while offering clients the flexibility of content management systems and long-term support. They focus on creating distinctive, functional websites that reflect each brand's voice and vision. Alongside web design, their branding and graphic design supports clients in building a strong identity and meaningful connection with their audience. They are currently open to new client collaborations and excited to take on new projects.

“
Orqa Design build long-term partnerships with businesses that value thoughtful, ongoing support – and are especially keen to connect with more women in business.
